
Publication Policy

The Proceedings of the Cambridge Antiquarian Society are published as a contribution to the education of the public in history, architectural history and archaeology with particular reference to Cambridgeshire, Huntingdonshire and Peterborough, and districts immediately surrounding. The Proceedings are intended to interest and engage both the Society's members and readers among the many other societies and organisations with which the Society corresponds in Britain and overseas, and, in general, to appeal to all readers. We seek to publish papers of lasting academic value clearly presented in plain language. Volume by volume, we seek a balanced perspective over the research that takes place across the spectrum of the Society's interests. The Society welcomes contributions and cordially invites prospective contributors to consider the following notes on submissions.

Submissions

Prospective contributors to the Proceedings are invited to consult the Editor before submitting the final texts of articles or notes. The Editor's address is printed in the list of the Society's Officers at the front of this volume.

The Editor will appraise submissions by using the following criteria. With appropriate new evidence or new interpretation, the paper should address a problem or issue recognised by academic or professional researchers, or it should present a new problem cogently and coherently. The paper should clearly expose the problem or issue and relate it systematically to the evidence.

The cost of printing and mailing is high so, other things being equal, a succinct paper is more likely to be accepted. The Editor is glad to advise on formats for submission.

Formal submissions should be made both in hard copy and electronically, and should give an estimate of the number of words. A publication proposal form, obtainable from the Editor, should be submitted. Authors are advised not to provide original illustrations until invited to do so. Papers deemed suitable by the Editor are reviewed by referees selected as peers. The Editor reserves the right to refuse to publish a paper even when earlier approval of its subject has been given.

Papers are accepted for publication on the understanding that they have not already been accepted elsewhere. Copyright will normally remain with the Society. The Society intends to make the Proceedings available on the internet in due course on a subscription basis. Copyright licences obtained for items included in articles must allow this.

The Editor is supported and advised by the Society's Editorial Committee.
